Subject: Regarding English Exemption

Dear Sir/Madam,

I saw this email in a news article in Medical Observer. I think India should also be on the list of exemptions as all the medical books used in Indian medical schools are in English. One cannot graduate in India with a medical degree without having a sound knowledge of English. Furthermore all patient's medical records, tests, treatment are documented in English.

I passed my OET in 2000 when I migrated to Australia and later passed the MCQ. I was working in [REDACTED] Hospital in stem cell doing patient's medical histories, consent, follow up, and am now working as a medicine facilitator for GPs. I would be highly obliged if I can get the exemption as I can then apply to RACGP for my overseas GP years assessment. This would help me to get a job as GP/RMO. I am waiting for clinical placement. Meanwhile, I also want to apply for limited registration as I am an Australian Citizen without fellowship looking for GP/RMO position.

Thanking you,

Yours Sincerely,
