Hello there

I am a midwife from Iran with about 8 years experience in labor wards and a huge midwifery knowledge. on the other hand, I am doing my PhD at [REDACTED] at the moment. So, my English proficiency is acceptable and I don't have any problem with communication. But I think IELTS exam is not enough fair and reliable for testing individuals' ability to speak or make communication in the society. specially, getting 7 in four skills in one sitting is not fair at all. additionally, I think that having overall 7 is close to 7 in four skills.

Sum up: I agree with:

1. accepting IELTS results across multiple settings
2. accepting overall 7

Finally

3. I think for working IELTS module General is much more practicable.

Thank you for this poll

Best Regards

Sara
