I would like to strongly object to the proposed changes as there is no scientific basis for them and are onerous.

I have 336 points this triennium, and even did the worthless PLAN under sufferance before it was quite rightly made optional.

I am still a keen general practitioner of 42 years and love keeping up to date with current treatments and diagnostic tools via reading medical magazines and attending meetings after hours.

Onerous changes without a scientific basis that can show an improved outcome should be resisted strongly.

Please reconsider; these changes will further encourage senior doctors such as myself to leave the profession and cause a huge workforce shortage.
